Night Flying Over Channel Inaugurated And Much Expected

LONDON, June 7 — (Associated Press Mail)—Night flying between England and France, which was inaugurated early this month, is expected to add immensely to the commercial value of aerial communication. It saves time, and makes possible remarkable train and steamship connections which were before impossible.

The first plane to travel between London and Paris at night left the London air station at ten o'clock and landed at the Paris aerodrome soon after midnight. It contained Brigadier General W. S. Branceker, Director of Civil Aviation; Colonel L. E. Blandy, Controller of Air Communications; a navigator, pilot, two wireless operators and a mechanic.

The air station at Grovdon outside London, was a blaze of searchlights, colored electric globes, and powerful incandescent arc lamps. The illuminating cabin of the machine and the red, white and green navigating lights made it an object of rare beauty as it rose in the darkness and headed for the coast.

On arriving in Paris General Branceker said: "I dined comfortably at a London hotel, motored down to Crovdon, got into the machine, and am here at one in the morning after a very leisurely flight. I am ready to go to bed in Paris or am prepared to go on to Marseilles to make a ship connection there."

"I expect regular passenger night-flying soon to start," continued the Director of Civil Aviation, "but certain things are needed before it becomes general between Paris and London."

The first essential is greater perfection of wireless telephony on board airplanes, so that pilots can learn what the weather is ahead of them. Then we need better lighting of intermediate aerodromes, in order that pilots may be able to land safely if they find Paris covered with an unexpected bank of fog. At present whenever there is a fog the French intermediate stations send up rocket flares to a height of 1,000 feet at ten-second intervals to mark their position.

The flight of General Branceker was followed a few nights later by a night round trip between Paris and London. This machine left Paris at 10 P. M., arrived at Crovdon at 1 A. M., left for Paris at 2:50 A. M. and got back to Paris at 6:05 A. M.

Great Britain pays her aviation companies a subsidy of $250 for every complete flight across the English Channel. This has encouraged most of the companies to put on a daily service, which is always well patronized, especially by Americans. The railroad and steamship fare across the channel occupying eight hours is about $25, while the air trip, which takes little more than two hours, is one-third more expensive, plus baggage charges.

Air taxiab service is the latest convenience offered the London public. A former officer of the British Flying Forces in France has established a fleet of small airplanes in the city and suburban districts which he calls "air taxicabs." Passengers are landed almost at their doorsteps, instead of at some distant aerodrome.

One of the pilots alighted with a woman on the lawn in front of her home. Earlier in the day the same aviator took Jockey Steve Donoghue, the winner of the Derby from the Epsom track to the stables of his home. "This meets my idea of speed," said Donoghue, who has ridden some of the fastest thoroughbreds in the world. Usually in taking an airplane I've been dropped miles away from by destination instead of yards."

Water Runs Up Hill By New Invention

LONDON, June 21 — (Associated Press Mail)—A water lifting apparatus which seems to flout the natural law that water cannot run uphill, and by which the tremendous energy of the rising tides may be harnessed for use by man, is an invention of Thomas G. Allen, graduate of Washington University, St. Louis, and now a British subject. The "Hydrautomat," as the apparatus is called, is the result of two years of experiments. A working model has been viewed by scores of engineers, some of whom have been baffled by the simplicity of the cycle of operation. It has lifted water 20 feet above the river level.

The hydrautomat is designed to raise water in any quantity from a running stream to any desired height without the use of standard equipment such as pumps, rams or water wheels. The apparatus harnesses two natural sources of energy, the weight of a column of water and atmospheric pressure. By means of a series of tanks, one above the other and a sluice-gate, which alternately brings suction and pressure forces to play, 80 percent of the energy of the pressure water used is obtained. The height required is reached by carrying the series of tanks, alternating open and closed chambers, together with air conducting pipes, to the desired height.

It is believed there is unlimited scope for the hydrautomat on streams where hydraulic power developments are not feasible because of the small amount of fall. One of the first applications is expected to be on irrigation projects.

In a broad sense, according to the inventor, the purpose of the hydrautomat is to convert the contained energy of large quantities of water at a low head into that of a smaller quantity of water at a high head, or to compel a stream to hoist part of itself up over the land for commercial or agricultural purposes. The principal is fixed; the application is to be determined by local requirements.

World patent rights have been issued. It appears that in the world's inventive records the principle of the hydrautomat has been remotely approached, but never attained.

WELLS—LYONS

From the mainland has come an account of the wedding of Herbert S. Wells, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Wells of this island of which brief mention has already been made by Maui News. The article follows:

"Miss Lois V. Lyon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter T. Lyon, was married last Friday evening to Herbert Sessions Wells, Son of Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Wells of Hawaii. Dr. Rowland B. Dodge of Berkeley, a friend of both families, performed the ceremony at the Sixth avenue home of the bride's parents in the presence of a large number of young friends.

"The bride was gowned in white canton crepe, embroidered in pearls and silver. She wore the veil, which the groom's mother wore at her marriage. The bridesmaid were Miss Lubov Bujanoff of this city and Miss Sara Johnson of Los Angeles, whose gowns of pink silk crepe were similarly designed. The groom's attendants were his brother, Norman Wells, of the University of California and his chum, Charles Furnish of Stanford University.

"The bride is a graduate of the University of California. After graduation she became assistant bacteriologist for the City of Oakland, which position she resigned at the outbreak of the war to assume the duties of bacteriologist for the army. She was assigned to Camp Fremont, where she was stationed until the termination of hostilities. It was at Fremont where Wells was in the medical department, that the friendship between the two commenced. At the conclusion of the war Miss Lyon accepted the position of bacteriologist with the State Health Department of North Dakota and took up special work at the university of that state. She resigned that position to study medicine at Stanford University, completing the second year's work last week.

"Well is a graduate of Stanford University, where he has been studying medicine the past two years. He has been admitted with high recommendations to Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore. During vacations he fills positions which give him valuable business experiences.

"The bride is a member of Upsilon Chapter of Zeta Tau Alpha sorority of the University of California. The groom is a member of Iota Chapter of Omega Upsilon Phi honorary medical fraternity at Stanford.

"After spending three months in the Yosemite Valley, the temporary home will be established in Baltimore until Wells completes his medical course. It is expected that the permanent home will be established in California."

DINNER AND BRIDGE

For Mrs. J. H. Trask who is soon to leave for the mainland and Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Hansen in honor of the third anniversary of their marriage, Mr. and Mrs. D. S. Wadsworth entertained at their High street home on Tuesday night, the affair taking the form of a dinner followed by bridge. For the occasion the Wadsworth home had been made a bower of flowers and on the charmingly appointed table was "hula girl place cards."

At bridge first ladies' prize was won by Mrs. C. E. Chatterton, consolation prize by Mrs. Walter A. Engle, first men's prize C. E. Chatterton and consolation F. L. Hoogs and their were guest favors for Mrs. Trask and Mrs. Hansen. Those present were:

Great Majority of Culsion Lepers Now Taking Treatment

MANILA, P. I. June 20—(Associated Press Mail)—More than 3,900 lepers out of the 5,000 in the colony on Culsion Island are now receiving treatment, 3,600 of this number taking the ethyl-ester treatment and about 300 the Mercado treatment, according to Prof. Shirley E. Roberts, vice-president of the Philippine Anti-leprosy Society, who has just returned to Manila from Culsion where he spent a month working among the patients.

"This is a record that I think no other country can equal," said Prof. Roberts. "When Governor General Wood became chief executive of the Philippines seven months ago, only 300 lepers were receiving treatment. The new Culsion is a place transformed; a new spirit is abroad among the personnel and the patients. In time we may eliminate leprosy from the Philippines altogether. This will be aided if sufferers learn to present themselves to the authorities in the incipient stage. While I was in Culsion 58 lepers were brought there from the island of Cebu, and of these at least 40 had been afflicted for several years."
